The scrum-half burst his cruciate ligament against Ireland during the Six Nations in March and has been quiet since, giving countless hours to recovery and training. The Toulouse No. 9, who aided France's capture of gold in rugby sevens at the Paris 2024 Olympics, has reportedly been linked to relocating abroad, having formerly criticized France’s Top 14 wage caps that limit financial flexibility for elite players.

Now, Les Bleus head coach Fabien Galthié has affirmed that his captain will be incorporated in the November training camp, though with stipulations ensuring careful physical management. Though Dupont will rejoin training on the grass at Marcoussis with his colleagues, he will not participate in any of France’s forthcoming Test contests as the staff continue to monitor his progress closely.

He will train with us in the 42 plus one, Galthié told Sud Ouest. You should not ask him for the difficult. Antoine is completing his recovery and preparing for his return to competition ahead of the Autumn Internationals. His presence in camp will boost team morale and inspire confidence among the younger players.

Dupont's Recovery Strengthens as France Gears Up for Autumn Internationals 2025

He will train with care and strength, allowing his knee the time it deserves. Dupont has constant ball work this week with his club but has not yet engaged in full contact, as the medical team wants to avoid unnecessary risks before full clearance. His steady progress is a positive sign for France ahead of the Autumn Internationals 2025, where his leadership and experience will be invaluable to the squad.

During the Autumn Internationals, France struggles with South Africa, Fiji, and Australia, and Dupont is likely to offer guidance off the pitch, mentoring younger players and decisive tactical discussions. The Top 14 season is adjourned during the international window, and Toulouse actually allowed Dupont to journey and train with his national team, seeing his company as vital for morale and continuity.

Toulouse head coach Ugo Mola stated: Each day, we are a bit nearer to his retort. Hopefully, we will see him returning on the field in just under two months, fully returned and harsher than ever. If Dupont's recovery progresses flawlessly, he should be suitable to play in next year's Six Nations, where he could acquire his 60th cap, a major landmark for one of France's modern icons.

Meanwhile, the Wallabies prepare for their primary drive under new head coach Les Kiss, following Joe Schmidt’s popular revival of Australian rugby, stressing discipline and cautious structure. Australia will be eager to travel to Rome and avenge their 2022 defeat, aiming to prove their revival under new management.

France Vs Australia Tickets: Australia Maintains Dominance

With 20 wins out of 21 meetings, Australia still holds a hyped record; their last visit to Rome was a 26–7 win in 2018, a match recalled for its relentless physicality. If players like Rob Valetini and Will Skelton feature, Italy’s pack could be severely tested both in scrums and breakdowns. Rugby fans are already showing growing interest in France vs Australia Tickets ahead of the upcoming Autumn Internationals.

Ulster head coach Richie Murphy asserts that any of his players seeking to earn an Ireland position should focus on solid club performances that will lead to international calls naturally through consistency. Ireland will face New Zealand, South Africa, Japan, and Australia during the November autumn tests, a demanding fixture list that will reveal their depth and endurance.

Only three Ulster players were nominated in Simon Easterby’s preliminary Six Nations squad in February, versus 23 from Leinster and five from each of Munster and Connacht. That inequality reflected Ulster’s disappointing season, in which they finished 14th in the United Rugby Championship, a campaign plagued by inconsistency and injuries.

It’s based on performances. If our lads want to play for Ireland, they must don that white shirt and deliver well, Murphy told NI about those aspiring for selection. That is our message internally: don’t search elsewhere. Focus on us and make us excel. People will observe that, and you will attain recognition as a consequence.
